Q	Imagine seeing the night sky turn bright green, purple and red, and that all of these lights suddenly start dancing around. It is one of the most beautiful views known to humans. Although these lights, called auroras, look completely magical, their happening can really be explained through science. Appearing above the North and South poles, they are created when electrically charged particles from the sun knock and go into atmosphere, their color variations depend on the type of gas particles which come together. Auroras do not just appear every night – their activity happens in cycles, and reaches its peak every 11 years. For this reason, interested viewers should really plan their trip carefully. Apart from the poles, auroras are best seen in parts of Canada, Iceland, Norway and the Siberia. Answer the questions according to the text. 47. M	Anemia If there are too few red cells in a person's blood, they may have a disease called anemia. Red blood cells are important because they carry oxygen all over the body. Some people with anemia have fewer than normal red blood cells. Others have enough red cells that do not work correctly. Many different medical problems can cause or create anemia. Some types of anemia are genetic diseases (handed down from parents to children). A genetic disease may change the shape of red blood cells or their size. Some bacteria or viruses can stop the body from making enough red blood cells. An unhealthy diet – especially one low in iron, folic acid or vitamin B12 can also keep the body from making enough red blood cells. Some drugs can also damage or destroy red cells.
