Part E: Cloze Test

Directions: Read the following passage and decide which choice (1), (2), (3), or (4) best fits each space. Then mark the correct choice on your answer sheet.

Social media aims to "transform" the way we handle interpersonal relationships on a daily basis. This(46), we can analyze some of the trends related to social media, while remaining cautious about oversimplifications, since these are diverse and very dynamic products. The(47) number of friendships in Facebook is between 100 and 300. However, only 25 per cent of these are described as "actual friends",(48) the difference between what is considered online and offline friendship. This(49) a layer to our representation of friendship gradients: indeed, online and offline friendship seem to possess different characteristics. There are at least two noteworthy aspects here: firstly, what is(50) friendship by some social media is a bond that can refer to different types of relationships. Indeed, different social media focus on(51) types of interaction: e.g. LinkedIn or Academia focusing on professional relationships, while Facebook and Instagram on more casual, community-based ones. And, secondly, the(52) structure of the digital medium significantly changes interpersonal interactions. Online friendship makes it possible to maintain a number of relationships that would have been abandoned in offline life—e.g., due to an excessively large geographical distance between the people involved,(53) ambient co-presence—but also create new, unexpected connections that would be difficult to reconcile with offline life. Reconnecting with old friends and maintaining long distance friendships—and other types of relations—are(54) ideas here. This brings us to the second fundamental aspect related to social media: the central role of interaction.(55) a friendship can only be sustained through as much constant interaction between friends as possible, maintaining friendships that would have disappeared in the offline world requires an increased amount of interaction, e.g. through activities such as funny comments, 'likes' and tags.

Part F: Reading Comprehension

Direction: In this part of the test, you will read three passages. Each passage is followed by some questions. Answer the questions by choosing the best choice (1), (2), (3), or (4). Then mark the correct choice on your answer sheet.

Passage 1:

Covering around ten million square kilometers or just under 4 million square miles, Europe is the second smallest of the world's seven continents. But it is number three in terms of population: over 725 million people live there, some thinly spread in the cold of the far north or the heat of the far south, but most packed closely together in towns and cities. That population density, combined with centuries of international trade and the fact that it was the home of the Industrial Revolution, has made Europe one of the richest and most powerful parts of the globe.

Historically, it was also one of the most violent. Its turbulent history was crowned in the twentieth century by two world wars, after which it was divided during nearly fifty years of Cold War into the capitalist 'West' and the communist 'East'. With the collapse of the latter, however, Europe now contains more genuinely democratic states than any other continent on earth. But Europe, like most continents, is not solely a place, a geographical container for those states. It is also an idea and an identity. Indeed, our notions of where it begins and ends are fuzzy: they change to suit our conceptions of who should be in and who should be out. For instance, based on different sources, it excludes some states like Russia, Ukraine, Georgia and indeed Turkey, despite the fact that all of them pop up in the European section of news media and despite the fact that they were considered to be sufficiently European to join the European Union.

56- The underlined word "it" in paragraph 1 refers to

- 1) Europe 2) globe 3) trade 4) density

57- The underlined word "solely" in paragraph 2 is closest in meaning to

- 1) practically 2) ideally 3) merely 4) necessarily

58- According to paragraph 1,

- 1) European people do not live in rural areas of this continent at all
2) there are four continents with a larger population than Europe
3) there is not a smaller continent compared with Europe in the world

59- Which of the following is NOT mentioned in the passage?

- 1) A military event that influenced Europe
2) The name of a continent other than Europe
3) A country that some consider to be European
4) An economic event that helped shape Europe

- 60- According to the passage, which of the following statements is true?
- 1) The concentration of people settling in the far south of Europe is by far larger than that residing in the far north.
 - 2) Some countries are considered to be European by all while others are not so, with Georgia belonging to the former.
 - 3) In part of their history, European countries tended to maintain different ideas about the manner in which they governed their societies.
 - 4) European history was characterized by fierce conflicts in the past, but was relatively less chaotic in the twentieth century.

Passage 2:

The closest star to the Earth is the Sun. The Sun is made up mostly of hydrogen gas, with a significant portion of it made of helium gas. A small percentage of the Sun contains other elements in gas form. Even though the Sun is made entirely of gas, it is very dense at its core. The Sun is not a solid body, like a planet, so even if it weren't too hot, a person couldn't stand on its surface, because it doesn't have a solid surface like the surface of the Earth. However, the density of the Sun near the core is very high, much higher than the density of the Earth, even at its core. That extremely high density is necessary for the Sun to produce light.

The Sun produces energy through what is known as the thermonuclear fusion of hydrogen into helium in its core. This means, essentially, that hydrogen atoms are being smashed together producing energy, as well as heavier helium atoms. After the energy has completed its long journey from the center of the Sun to its edge, then through space, this energy is received by us on the Earth in the form of electromagnetic radiation (or, light).

Our Sun is huge, compared to the Earth. The Sun has a mass of about 2×10^{30} kg, which is about 330,000 times more massive than the Earth. At the center of the Sun is the core, where energy is released in thermonuclear reactions. Surrounding the core are concentric shells called the radiative zone, the convective envelope (which occurs at approximately 0.8 of the Sun's radius), the photosphere (the layer from which visible radiation emerges), the chromosphere, and, finally, the corona (the Sun's outer atmosphere). The Sun has a diameter of almost 1.4 million km. This is about 110 times the diameter of the Earth.

- 61- According to paragraph 1, which of the following is true about the Earth and the Sun?

Sun's density varies by region

- 1) The latter's density is not identical in its different parts.
- 2) The former's core is much denser than the latter's core.
- 3) The latter's surface is almost as dense as the former's core.
- 4) The former's density remains fixed as its depth increases.

Core ≠ Surface

- 62- According to paragraph 3, which of the following best expresses the writer's opinion about the claim that the diameter of the Earth is known?

- 1) Skepticism
- 2) Disapproval
- 3) Ambivalence
- 4) Approval

Information supports the stated measurement

- 63- What does the passage mainly discuss?

- 1) A celestial body, its composition, function and properties
- 2) Comparing two celestial bodies and their constituent elements
- 3) The Sun's indispensable role in regulating life on the Earth
- 4) The multifaceted interaction between the Sun and the Earth

Passage 3

In our culture, adults do typically talk to young children in a special way known as "motherese". We tend to speak more slowly and more clearly, we may speak in a higher pitch and exaggerate our intonation, and sentences are generally grammatical. However, motherese is not syntactically simpler. [1] It contains a range of sentence types, including syntactically complex sentences such as questions (Do you want your juice now?); embedded sentences (Mommy thinks you should sleep now); imperatives (Pat the dog gently!); and negatives with tag questions (We don't want to hurt him, do we?). And adults do not simplify their language by dropping inflections from verbs and nouns or by omitting function words such as determiners and auxiliaries, though children do this all the time. [2] It is probably a good thing that motherese is not syntactically restricted. If it were, children might not have sufficient information to abstract the rules of their language.

Although infants prefer to listen to motherese over normal adult speech, studies show that using motherese does not significantly affect the child's language development. In many cultures, adults do not use a special style of language with children, and there are even communities in which adults barely talk to babies. Nevertheless, children around the world acquire language in much the same way, irrespective of these varying circumstances. [3] The child does not develop linguistically because he is exposed to ever more adult-like language. Rather, the adult adjusts his language to the child's increasing linguistic sophistication.

Analogy, imitation, and reinforcement cannot account for language development because they are based on the (implicit or explicit) assumption that what the child acquires is a set of sentences or forms rather than a set of grammatical rules. Theories that assume that acquisition depends on a specially structured input also place too much emphasis on the environment rather than on the grammar-making capacities of the child. [4] These proposals do not explain the creativity that children show in acquiring language, why they go through stages, or why they make some kinds of "errors" but not others, for example, "Give me other one spoon" but not "Is the boy who sleeping is dreaming about a new car?"

abstract rules = extract / generalize rules

66- The underlined word "abstract" in paragraph 1 is closest in meaning to

- 1) summarize
- 2) extract
- 3) improve
- 4) explicate

67- Why does the writer mention "Is the boy who sleeping is dreaming about a new car?" in paragraph 3?

- 1) To exemplify a certain kind of speech which is sometimes known as motherese
- 2) To emphasize the inadequacy of certain approaches to child language development
- 3) To draw attention to the fact that children learn vocabulary prior to grammar
- 4) To indicate that in the development phase, children are prone to linguistic mistakes example shows inadequacy of imitation / reinforcement theories

- 68- According to the passage, which of the following statements is NOT true?
- 1) Unlike children who employ simplified language for instance by ignoring function words such as auxiliaries, adults tend to keep function words even in motherese.
 - 2) Motherese can in a sense be said to be the middle ground between adult speech and child speech, as it is simultaneously similar to and different from both of them.
 - 3) Some studies reveal that children, who are exposed to different modes of speech used by their parents, nevertheless acquire language in a more or less similar way.
 - 4) Concepts cited to elucidate the child language acquisition process such as imitation and reinforcement posit that the milieu in which children develop counts for less.
- 69- Which of the following statements can best be inferred from the passage?
- 1) The properties of motherese may be useful for getting a child's attention or for reassuring the child, but it is not a driving force behind language development.
 - 2) On account of the numerous complications surrounding the subject of child language acquisition, conducting scholarly research in this field is futile.
 - 3) Among linguists and scholars, the term motherese is considered to be a misnomer as the name quite literally fails to include half of its speakers: the fathers.
 - 4) The imitation of the speech of children by parents is observed in other species too, a fact that gives more weight to the role of motherese in the development of language.
- 70- In which position marked by [1], [2], [3] or [4], can the following sentence best be inserted in the passage?
- Adults seem to be the followers rather than the leaders in this enterprise.
- 1) [1] 2) [2] 3) [3] 4) [4]

69: child acquire language despite different input
→ motherese ≠ driving force of language development

70: Adults adjust language to child's increasing sophistication
→ Adults follow child's development
